Spring Readiness Guide: Learn How to Get Ready with Bigbelly

Spring arrives fast — and public spaces come back to life even faster.

Warmer days bring more walkers, runners, bikes, outdoor events, and busy parks. Preparing ahead helps communities stay clean, calm, and welcoming as recreation returns.

This guide gives municipal and operations teams a simple, practical roadmap to get ready.

Spring Planning Checklist

Start here to prepare before foot traffic surges:

- Identify high-traffic parks, downtown corridors, and recreation areas
- Audit current waste and recycling capacity
- Confirm container placement before crowds return
- Review collection routes and schedules
- Plan for seasonal events and weekend surges
- Add capacity where needed in priority locations

A little planning now prevents big headaches later.

Operational Readiness Tips

As temperatures rise and activity increases:

- Prepare for higher volumes before overflow happens
- Deploy fully enclosed containers in busy locations
- Reduce litter and pests with secure infrastructure
- Use data to optimize collection timing
- Focus resources where they matter most

Smart preparation keeps teams efficient all season long.

Priority Locations for Spring

Make sure these spaces are ready first:

- Parks and playgrounds
- Trails and waterfronts
- Downtowns and main streets
- Transit hubs and public venues
- Event spaces and outdoor gathering areas

Where people gather most is where readiness matters most.

What to Look for in Spring-Ready Infrastructure

Effective public space solutions should be:

- Fully enclosed to prevent overflow
- Pest-resistant and secure by design
- All-weather durable
- High-capacity for busy days
- Data-enabled for smarter operations

Fully Enclosed. All-Weather.
Built for real life outdoors.

Measuring Success

Spring readiness should deliver clear results:

- Fewer overflows
- Cleaner sidewalks and parks
- Reduced collection trips
- Better operational efficiency
- Improved resident and visitor experience

Cleaner spaces. Calmer operations.
Happier communities.

Ready to Plan Ahead?

Whether you're preparing for spring crowds or fine-tuning current operations, we're here to help.

Current Bigbelly Customers

Getting ready for spring also means refreshing what you already have.

If your units need a little post-winter TLC:

- Schedule professional bin cleaning
- Review placement for higher-traffic months
- Add capacity ahead of busy seasons
- Optimize collections using smart data

A clean, well-maintained system keeps public spaces looking their best all season long.

Cleaner spaces for walking, biking, gathering, and everyday life — all together.
